

“The government has proven time and time again that they have to be forced to do the right thing.”

Rights upheld.

On February 12, Doug Ford’s Bill 124 was ruled unconstitutional, the second time the Ontario courts have rejected this legislation. The decision is a ringing victory for the nurses and other public sector workers whose wages were punitively suppressed for three years.

Bill 124 was misguided and mean-spirited from the beginning and is a direct cause of the nursing shortage that continues to devastate our public health-care system.

This is not the first time the Ford government has had to back down from wrongful actions. When a government repeatedly fails to hold itself accountable...others have to do it for them.
